THE FUN OF REPORTING PARLIAMENT.

"There are three estates in Parliament, said Macaulay once in a speech in the House of Commons; 'but in the reporters' gallery yonder there sits a fourth estate more important than them all.

This famous declaration-which is now regarded generally not as a mere thetorical ligura of speech, but as the literal truthwas not received with floud and prolonged cheers' by the representatives of the Press. In the French Chamber of Deputies it is a common episode for the reporters to appland sentiments in accord with the policy of the nowspapers they represent uttered by. representatives on the floor below. The only incident of the kind that ever occurred in the Press gallery of the House of Commons was when an excitable reporter on the staff of the Dublin 'Freeman's Journal 2129 enthusiastically waved a copy of that organ about his head and loudly cheered on the conclusion of Gladstone's great speech introducing the Home Rule Bill of 1885.

In the gallery the reporters are most AFEMBERS are informed that NE & orderly. They never display their feelings IVI RULES and REGULATIONS have been there. But in the writing-out rooms beoutrier of an hour in the box, wrestle with the hieroglyphics on their note-books, Torries may be heard denouncing Mr Bro-Instant, at a Ta p.m., to be held (by kind drick for dropping his voice, and Radicals saying uncomplimentary things of Mr. Asquith for tearing along at a rate no

They also pretend in their claborate show of argument to be anxious to bring hon, gentleman on the opposite side of the House round to their own views and opinions. Instances of votes having been diverted by a speech extremely rare in the history of Parliament, No, the volume of talk, the session is intended exclusively for the 12316/12318 journalists, busy with pen and pencil in the gallory over the Speakor's chair. During the time of dining-between seven and nine o'clock-when as a rule the undistinguished members of the House have 28178/28353 the only opportunity at their disposal of stating their views, an honourable gentle-36821/36830 | man may be seen addressing an audience 38189/38213 | consisting solely-so far as the Moor of the House is concurred -of the Speaker and 48558/48582 the clerks at the table. He however, is not in the least disconcerted by the meagreness of his audience. He has sont the manuscript of his speech to the local organ of his. constituency, or he is aware that the repre-968 sentative of that newspaper is in the Reporters' Gallery taking down almost every. word that falls from his lips, Why, then, should be bother because his colleagues prefer the delights of the smoking-room, the dining room, or the Terrace to listening

A few years ago there happened to be two members named Power in the Irish Party. John wrote out a most eloquent speech, which he proposed to deliver in an approaching Irish debate, and sent it, before hand, to a Dublin daily newspaper. On the night of the debate the other Power (Richard) succeeded in first ! catching the Speakers eye, and next morning the Dublin daily newspaper, assuming it was John that had spoken, come out with the report, five columns long, of a grand speech which, though it was plentifully supplied with 'cheers,' 'loud laughter.' hear,

Yet he holdly got up in the House later on, amid rears of derisive cheers and laughter, and proceeded to deliver—an entirely different, ticisms of the telegraph or the compositor in the reports of parliamentary proceedings also helps to contribute the 'comic relief-to the work of the reporters. Dr Magee, the late Archbishop of York. was made to declare in the House of Lords that 'drunkenness is jolly.' His Grace subsequently explained that his experience was too limited to enable him to express an opinion as to whether or not it was great fun to be ' under the influence,' and that all he had really committed himself to was that 'drunkenness is folly.' . We must put a stop to the practice of shaving factory boys to death,' exclaimed a Labour representative - according to a report in a provincial journal-in the debate on a Bill to limit the hours of work in fact-

TIME AND MONEY.

CHCKNESS causes a loss of both time and money. You lose the time and have the expense of medical attendance, entilling a double loss. This can be avoided by using some reliable remedy at the first stage of the sickness. The purchase of a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoes Remedy often proves a profitable investment, for, by its use acthe first appearance of any unusual looseness of the bowels, a severe attack of diarrhoes or dysentery may be averted, that might otherwise compel a week's cessation from labor. Every household should have bottle at hand. It never fails and is plen ant to take. Get it to-day, It may save or life. Fot sale by All Dealers; WATKINS Ltd. General Agents.
